TER SAN JUAN COUNTRY.

One who seems to know of what he writes, gives a glowing account of the san Juan country and its gold and silver deposits. He says:

add considerably to the volume of water in the river. Even before the storm the water had much increased, springs which had been quite dry for many weeks had resumed their usual flow, and the number of these along the course of the stream being very great, they contributed not a little to raise the water.

Adjoining the southwestern part of the Territory of Colorado, bordering upon the Rio Grande south, lies a tract of mountain country five million acres in extent, which has just been purchased by the Government by treaty with the Ute Indians. It is one of the richest mineral sections thus far explored, and the color acres the strong and myeswill shortly attract the strong and inves-tigating attention of the West. It is about three hundred miles from

It is about three hundred miles from Denver to the boundary, and took us five days buggy riding and seven days on horseback to reach it. We found it a mountain district, with little or no farming land, and no timber except scrub pine, quaking ash and cottonwood, but rich beyond conception in ores—silver, gold, copper and iron—as well as coal. Only one mine has been really developed, and that only in part. It is called the Little Giant, and is owned by a Chifalse pretenses. All of the indicted are now in the County Jail. Only one mine has been really developed, and that only in part. It is called the Little Giant, and is owned by a Chicago company. They have spent about $75,000 in working it, and their stock is about $500,000. Their machinery is very poor and works bailly, yet I was told by a good many persons there that they were taking out $1,000 a day in gold. They are about to put up a 15-stamp mill, and the manager claims that when it is up they can take out $25,000 a week. Their vein is a foot and a half the k, and is calculated upon to yield $5,000 a ton.

States a ton.

There is another rich mine near by, which I think is really a continuation of the same lead, that is being negotiated for by Chicago parties. The Little Giant people say it is richer than theirs. The Little Giant people say it is richer than theirs. The Little Giant people claim that their mine is worth a million as soon as the treaty is ratified by the Government, and they can give a title which they have the they can give a title which they hereto-fore have been unable to do, it being held only in a miner's claim. One man he a silver lead six feet thick that he has figured up to be worth $287,000,000. I don't suppose he could raise $100 in

There was a mine called the Green Mountain, which, it was claimed, would reld $8,000 to the ton. Then there is a laid called the Silver Star, which is forty feet thick and yields good pay ore. There is copper cropping out for miles in veins that look to be from twenty to forty feet thick, but no one takes up copper because there is so much gold and silver. You can see any amount of copper along the face of the mountains, and right in the center of the tract there is a rich the center of the tract there is a rich iron deposit. They claim that the silver leads are more valuable than the gold. ecause the veins are much thicker and

The streams are mere water-courses, except the Animus river, upon which less mines are located. The altitude of these mines are located. The altitude of these mines is 8,000 to 9,000 feet, and the mountains run up all around them 13,000 to 15,000 feet high. The peaks are very rocky and rugged, and are lifted high above the timber line. I have been through every part of the West, from British Columbia to Mexico: I don't think there is anywhere else so greats con-glemeration of mountains as in this San Juan country. The whole of those 5,-000,000 acres is just one grand mass of peaks. The road makes a descent at one place of 3,500 feet in two miles. It crosses the range at an altitude of 12,700 feet the highest wagon road in the world. Any one may go in and pre-empt it as they do prairie land. All that is required is that the person who locates a cum shall does he are aim shall dig a hole and post a notice worth of work per annum into it," as they say. At the end of five years he must go to the Land Office and pay $500, when a patent issues to him securing the properly absolutely. If a man neglects to work he $100. to work his $100 worth any year the claim is opened to the first comer. His abor is to be rated at miners' wages. If

Lome, on the Rio Grande. The scenery along the Rio Grande is very fine, but that river does not touch the mines: they are, as I have said, on the Animus and its headwaters. There is a canyon on the Animus which I did not see, but it is said to be a wonderful place, from 500 to 3,000 feet deep and twenty-five miles long, with a fail of the Animus (which at that point is some forty feet wide) having a sheer descent of nearly six hundred feet.

Two companies have applied for charters, each of which contemplates putting a good read over the ranges (which, by the way, are called the Uncomparga and Sun Juan) and a hotel is about to be erected in the vicinity of those mines already opened. Next Spring there will probably be an influx of people, and in a vern or two if any faith for the said of the s bey are, as I have said, on the Animus

IT appears, says the Enterprise of the surveys of the track of the Virginia and Truckee Railroad, now being made at Gold Hill, that in places in the neighborhood of the depot in that town nsighborhood of the depot in that town the entire road-bed has moved southward from sixteen to eighteen inches, and the rails will have to be brought back in order to right the track. This creeping of the ground is undoubtedly owing to the immense excavations below, far down in the howels of the garth. This down in the bowels of the earth. This shows that the whole place is on the Parties lately from White River inform us, says the White Pine News of the 18th, that a serious and perhaps fatal accident occurred at Tom Plane's ranch, at that at that place, by which a man, whose name we have been unable to learn, em hame we have been unable to learn, employed hauling hay, was injured. It appears that the man in question jumped from a hay-press and alighted upon a stack of loose hay wherein a pitchfork had been covered up. Both prongs of the fork entered his body between the legs inflicting a frightful wound. At less inflicting a frightful wound. The peaks of the Sierras, the summits of the Como mountains, and the crest of the distant Humboldt range, yesterday, says the Enterprise of the 14th, glittered with a coating of new snow, which remained upon them all day long.
